Summary:

A UK Investment Manager with an excellent reputation is looking to add an Investment Director to its Discretionary Private Client team.

Job description:

With a strong heritage in the UK and a set of core values which has been with them throughout their history. They have continued to grow their loyal client base in recent times by continuing to recognise their differing situations and investment needs through their bespoke portfolio service. Even in the current economic climate, their AUM has grown significantly via introductions from current investors, but also their strong network of professional advisers.

As they grow in the market, they are looking to add an experienced Investment Director to their team in London. They ideally seek someone with experience dealing with private client discretionary portfolios in the UK. As a number of their senior directors near retirement, there is potential to inherit a significant book of clients, but the successful individual would be required initially to nurture their own existing network and bring in new assets working alongside their experienced sales team.
